ARTIST BIO

Jon Thomson and Alison Craighead have been working with video and sound for over 9 years to create gallery and site-specific installations. More recently, they have been exploring the possibilities of the Internet and screen-based multimedia to create navigable, or user-led, environments. Much of their Internet work is concerned with using the World Wide Web as a site-specific context and to locate specific artworks that could not exist elsewhere.

Jon studied Fine Art in Leicester and PGdip Electronic Imaging at Duncan of Jordanstone College of Art in Dundee and currently lectures at The Slade School of Fine Art in London. Alison studied painting at Duncan of Jordanstone College of Art and is currently a researcher at the University of Westminster.
